

Wireless Access Policy

Bergenfield Public Library
50 W. Clinton Avenue
Bergenfield, NJ 07621

Wireless access to the Internet is available free of charge throughout the library. Sign up is not required. Use of library wireless access signifies agreement to be bound by the following policies.

Users of the library's wireless access agree to use wireless devices in a manner that is in compliance with all laws, including copyright.

Virus and security protection are the responsibility of the user. The library is not responsible for any damage to software or hardware resulting from use of the wireless Internet connection.

Use of the wireless access shall not be used to alter the library's network in any way, to disrupt other users of this wireless service, or to seek prohibited access to any other computer system.

Anyone using the network should be aware that there is no expectation of privacy when using the wireless Internet access.

Display or transmission of child pornography, obscene or sexually explicit material is prohibited. The Borough of Bergenfield and the Bergenfield Public Library prohibit acts of harassment against library patrons and staff, which includes conduct while using Internet access. Staff reserves the right to request that a patron exit a website if the staff member judges the material to be inappropriate for viewing in a public setting.

Users are responsible for configuring their own computers or other devices. The library does not offer technical support or guarantee wireless connectivity for any and all devices.

Violation of the library's wireless policy shall result in suspension of Internet privileges for both wireless and computer workstations and shall result in referral to the appropriate authorities.

Approved by the Bergenfield Library Board of Trustees, April 8, 2010
