Bergenfield Public Library Timeline As a result of a series of lectures on community cooperation held at Franklin School, a committee of public-spirited citizens agreed to work together to establish a public library. An association 1918 library was formed on April 29, 1918. Charter membership cost one dollar. By June the treasury amounted to $154, with the promise of another $25. The library, consisting of 420 donated books and another 200 on loan from the State Library, was located in an 8' X 10' room in Mutual Hall on Front Street (the corner of Front and Van Houten streets, next to the present day Wagon Wheel Restaurant). There were 180 registered borrowers. Mrs. Alice Little was the first librarian. The library association asked the Mayor and Council to place a proposal before the citizens to support the library with public funds. The proposal passed in November. Now a public library, the library moved to a room on the second floor of Borough Hall, located in the old Knollwood Hotel building (the site of Commerce Bank). Miss Gertrude Hautau (later 920 Mrs. Lewis) was hired as the librarian at $25 per month. There were 1150 books in the collection. Library hours were Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays 3-6 and 7-9 p.m. Library use grew quickly. The library expanded from two rooms to four. The collection also expanded and borrowing jumped from 1500 to 8000 items in a single year. In response to this rapid growth, the Trustees asked for an increase in the budget from $1000 to $1500. 1934 Part of a WPA project, a branch of the library opened at Lincoln School to serve those living on the south side of town. Each class visited the library for a half hour each week. Residents could use the library on Tuesdays, Wednesdays or Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. 937 The library, along with Borough offices, moved to the new municipal building, a converted Elks Club, the site of the present day Borough Hall. H, Bergenfield Library's first charging machine was installed, eliminating the need for hand-marking dates and card numbers. A children's librarian was hired in 1954 and Summer Reading Club, now an annual program, was offered for the first time. In 1956 the library was given more space at Borough Hall to use as a children's room. In 1955 Mrs. Bea James became Head Librarian. 1961 The Friends of the Library was organized. Responding to crowded conditions, the Friends and other concerned citizens launched a campaign to establish a separate building. On August 12, 1968, a new building opened to the public at W. Clinton Avenue and Front 968 Street, the site of a former playground. The collection had grown to 42,000 volumes and circulation had reached over 140,000 annually. Constructed to hold 75,000 volumes, the building was air-conditioned and offered a generous meeting room for up to 125 people, as well as exhibit space for cultural and educational programs. Mary Joyce Doyle was appointed Director of the library. Under her leadership, the Bergen County Cooperative Library System was established in 1979 with Bergenfield as one of its founding members. This marked the beginning of reciprocal borrowing among member communities. The English as a Second Language tutoring program began as an experiment and continues to be in high demand today.

Bergenfield Library went on-line with the Bergen County Computer Consortium to computerize borrowing and lending services. Housing 130,000 items, as well as offering computer databases and Internet access. Bergenfield Library was the fifth busiest library in Bergen County. Circulation exceeded 308,000 items. The meeting room was in constant use for children's programs, English as a Second Language tutoring, educational and recreational programs for Seniors, as well as by community groups. The Bergenfield Library had become a busy, vital hub of community activity serving patrons of all ages with the latest technologies and information formats. Awarded a State Library Construction Grant to expand the existing facility, the Borough of Bergenfield broke ground in October 2003 under direction of Director Mary Riskind. The new library would relieve over-crowding in the children's area, provide dedicated space for ESL tutoring, provide a room for teens, provide adult study rooms, and more space for computers, books and videos. On June 12, 2005 the newly renovated and expanded Bergenfield Public Library is formally dedicated to serve the future growth of the community. Recognizing the growing need to expand technology services to the public, the Library installs its wireless network. The network is later upgraded in 2016. 2012 After months of research and compiling extensive feedback from the community, the Library unveils its inaugural Strategic Plan. The five goals of the plan include: Promote the Library's Programs and Services, Build a Stronger Community, Improve the Technical Literacy of the Library Staff and the Community, and Ensure Financial Sustainability. Bergenfield patrons are now able to borrow eBooks and eAudiobooks right to their personal smart devices through BCCLS' new service, eBCCLS. Additional electronic resources such as eMagazines and streaming media are launched in subsequent years. The Board of Trustees establishes the "Lucille Tendler Community Service Award," which honors an upstanding group or individual who has shown long time commitment and dedication to service in Bergenfield. Lucille Tendler served on the Library's Board of Trustees for fourteen years and helped coordinate both the Library's Strategic Plan and Capital Campaign. Winners of the award include Joseph Verga and Matthew Connell. The Library celebrates its 100th anniversary. Special events to honor the occasion include a Birthday Block Party, time capsule project in tandem with the Bergenfield school district and community leaders' book club series. The Friends of the Library also host "A Walk through Time" formal celebration and commemorative ad journal which act as large scale fundraisers.

A Message from the Director...

Established by a small committee of public-spirited residents in 1918, the Library's history is as varied and complex as any good novel. We've undergone two significant construction projects (1968 & 2003), launched a desperately needed ESL service (1979), witnessed the birth of BCCLS (1979) and ushered in a wave of technology advancements.

An organization doesn't stick around for 100 years without some help along the way. To that end, I would like to say THANK YOU to the following groups:

- . The volunteers from the Centennial planning committee and Bergenfield school district who took time out of their busy lives to assist with fundraising and planning for this important milestone
- The Friends of the Library who have supported this organization since 1961 and whose efforts have raised thousands of dollars to purchase essential equipment and specialized materials
- The Library Board of Trustees who have provided structure and guidance since the Library's inception
- The Borough of Bergenfield for their continued financial support over the years
- The Library staff (past, present and future) who work hard to carry out its mission and core values
- Last, but certainly not least, the residents of Bergenfield for their steadfast dedication and continued patronage

Finally, as the current Director of the Bergenfield Public Library, I am proud to be included in the long line of dedicated professionals who have served this great community. Over the past 100 years, these Directors championed all that public libraries embody: lifelong learning, equal access to accurate and objective information, the long term value of early childhood literacy and the importance of community. My predecessors all made significant contributions during their tenure and each were vital in molding and shaping this great institution into what it is today. I would like to recognize the former Directors/Head Librarians for their hard work and commitment:

Alice Demarest Little – served 1918-1920 Gertrude Hautau Lewis - served 1920-1955 Beatrice James - served 1955-1971

- Mary Bintner served 1972-1973
- Mary Joyce Doyle served 1974-1999
- Robert Pawson served 1999-2002

Mary Riskind – served 2003-2015
